Advertisement for Oxford County Advertiser, dated July 28, 1893. The ad includes a large illustration of a steamship and various text blocks for local news, advertisements, and a large 'We are Bound to Reduce Our Stock' section. The text is arranged in multiple columns, with some sections highlighted in bold or larger fonts. The overall layout is typical of a newspaper advertisement from that era.

MERCHANTS' FAMILIAR WITH Mixed Paints that have been put upon the market during the last few years, will tell you that many of the names and features of these paints seem to think that they could not be so easily deceived. The fact is, that the merchant cared little what was contained in these paints, and made no difference to the quality of the materials. The cheapness and convenience of mixed paints, however, counted much in their favor. But the time has come when the fact that was actually painted, and not simply labeled paint, became apparent, and merchants received the knowledge that they were introduced upon the market, with the greatest of favor, because they knew that they were made of the best materials that could be bought, were full measure, and that none of the tricks used to cheapen the cost of production were resorted to. The merchant could recognize the names. The standard of excellence was no longer covered. The same old trick of paint is put up in pound cans as in large packages. At Clifton Point Co., New York, and Clifton Point Co., New York.

ELIXIR
From a prescription of the best known and most successful physician in the state of Maine. The remedy has proved so absolutely reliable that it has become practitioner, then prevailed on the latter to show him the spot where he found the remedy.

These rules at Toothbrush are known to have been erected by the great Toile toothbrush, Nebraska, who was far in advance of his time as to declare his faith in one supreme king, and here he found the remedy for the cure of the Unknown God, the Cause of Causes.
To this God were made no human sacrifices, but only the blood of the king and sweet scented gums. Under the law in this country all ruins are to be preserved, and the pleasure of the government, so Professor Deane has only permitted the use of the water after 25 which the good had fallen.

He was surprised by the discovery of the use of human bones, the skulls of which he unhesitatingly pronounces Toile toothbrush, Nebraska, who was also found, with a silver medal, which was undoubtedly used to strike the gold mine.
